MOORE & OWENS,

Barre's Best Clothiers,

122 North Main Street,

Barre, Vermont.

YOU may have noticed, here at home, or elsewhere as you travel about, that you can tell something about the character of a community by the way the people in it dress. Clothes don't make the man—but they're a pretty good index of his general characteristics.

We're all of us apt to forget this—to think about clothes as we do about food, without much consideration of their influence beyond the immediate moment of buying them.

But it's a fact that good clothes and the cultivation of a taste for good clothes does influence a man and a community—and naturally, since that's true, the better the clothes, the better the influence—and in the end the better the community and the men in it.

Now, we're in the clothing business—we want to do it in a way that will benefit and profit us, of course. And we are smart enough to see that what benefits the whole community, benefits the members of it—we're members of this community.

That's just why we make a specialty of selling such good clothes—because they're the best clothes to accomplish for you and for us the things clothes can do. The fact that the fabrics are the best is important—it proves to the wearers by actual experience that the best is really economical—that while it costs more than cheap mixtures, it's worth more than it costs.

The fact that these are stylish clothes, correct in detail, is another important point—such clothes develop and encourage taste in dress—men are better because they look better and feel it.

The perfect tailoring and finish—the attractive patterns and colors—the fine, choice imported or domestic fabrics—all these things are to be expected of clothes that have so perfectly shown the other important points.

You must see these clothes this season—there are no other such goods to be had in this or any other place—they're the finest, highest-class clothes made. And we sell them as a service to you, as well as for a profit to us.

For $10.00 you can have a selection from a pretty nice line of Suits and Overcoats—at $15.00 and $18.00 there is a large variety of very fine styles and patterns—and the strictly Hart Schaffner & Marx models from $18.00 to $27.50.
